Photo and fingerprint card are not required for C&R licenses. This will not change with the proposed new forms. It mostly just combines the forms so that we only have one main form and we have changed minor things such as the order in which items are listed on the form and clearer or more description in areas that we notice are common problem areas in an effort to process the forms quicker with less returns for incorrect or missing information.

Tracey-
Thanks for the response. I'm not super familiar with the current C&R form. The current one does not require any fingerprints or photographs for a C&R, correct? So that would be a change given the format of the RPQ, right?

A background check is still conducted for those holding a C&R license and therefore, there would be a requirement for the applicant to complete the Responsible Persons Questionnaire (RPQ) upon submitting their original application. Also, any new RPs that may be added to the license after it is issued, would have to complete the form as well.

The RPQ will make each responsible person responsible for verifying/certifying their own answers to the questions to be true, correct and complete to the best of their knowledge.

Good Morning-
In regard to the responsible persons information collection form, is it the intent of ATF to have that as a requirement for anyone applying for a C&R license as well?

Thank you,

Good Afternoon-
I was hoping you would be able to send me the following documentation for the proposed rule changes. I would like to receive a copy of the proposed questionnaire for responsible persons and all of the relevant instructions and/or additional information. I'd also like to receive a copy of the proposed application which combines ATF Form 5310.12 and 5310.16 along with any and all of the relevant instructions and/or additional information. This may be sent in an electronic format to this e-mail address.

Your timely attention to this matter is appreciated.
