General Comment

Yes, it is a lot to keep up with and can be a burden at times. Everything is pretty easy going for the most part, I understand that you must keep up with the meals daily as well as the attendance. However, when it comes to keeping track of the time that your employee's work on the Food program and actually breaking down the percentage and keeping track of it daily is very tedious. Especially when there salary is not covered at all even though the cook as well as the person who keeps up with the information daily salary is a large part of how you operate. The money we receive is a blessing and a great opportunity for us to make sure our residents wat healthy, but the extra work that needs to be done for the pay that does not cover them, because there is just not enough money in the allotted month is a lot.
