

Comment from Sue Thorn

With the rate of black lung cases increasing it is critical that coal miners have greater access to their health records. Mine owners shouldn't be able to hide medical results and should have to pay all benefits due in a claim before the award can be challenged through modification. Coal mining is dangerous work and our miners deserve to have their health concerns addressed as soon as possible, without mine owners hiding important facts.