TERMS OF CLEARANCE: OMB commends the Department for collaborating internally and with external federal partners to make this data collection a robust and sound survey. OMB agrees with the Department that the CRDC could serve as the base for a system of surveys. We also expect OCR and NCES to continue their strong collaboration. The Department's external discussions have brought to light that more work needs to be done before the Department can collect valid and reliable data on the numbers of students in juvenile detention facilities. OMB expects that by 2016, the Department will have had opportunity to make sufficient progress to decide whether it can expand the collection to include these facilities, and also will have completed quality assessments of different content areas in the survey; and therefore it gives this collection a two-year clearance.
