General Comment

I am glad that the EEOC is continuing to find better ways to make sure employers are nondiscriminatory in recruiting, hiring, and employing people. There are so many factors that many people don't think about that might prevent certain genders, races, of disabled people from even applying to different jobs, such as where the jobs are listed and how the listing is worded. I think it's great that the EEOC is looking to make sure that the practices are nondiscriminatory even at the recruitment level.
