I'm writing as the owner of Coeur Wine Company, a small wine importer/distributor in NY and NJ. Your attempt to make it more time-consuming and burdensome for those who oppose the continued tariffs on wine is absolutely unacceptable and ridiculous. If you anticipate receiving over 25,000 responses about these tariffs, maybe that should tell you that they're a bad idea and the opposition to them is overwhelming. Wine importers are going out of business and laying off workers and yet we're being asked to pay tariffs. I can't even begin to explain how bad of an idea it is to then say "let's make it way harder for our citizens to give feedback." And if you say it will take you $5,000,000,000 and 50,000 hours to process all the comments with each comment taking 120 minutes to process, the USTR is either 1) not being honest about the time/cost to do this or 2) is the most inefficiently run govt. organization and should fire everyone that works there and start over again. This is completely against small business and you're burying your heads in the sand to pretend you're not costing thousands of Americans their livelihoods.
