To whom it may concern,
I implore you to reconsider and remove the US tariffs on imported wine that were implemented in October 2019 following the Large Civil Aircraft Dispute. The world has significantly shifted since the initial application of these tariffs due to the Covid-19 pandemic, meaning restaurants in the USA need every possible aid we can provide them. The restaurant & hospitality industry is the second largest employer in the USA behind the pentagon, and removing these tariffs would be an enormous boon to their recovery. It would be much more effective to switch the tariffs to other industries for whom the Covid-19 pandemic resulted in an economic boom, as more tariff revenue could be generated and more pressure would be exerted on the European government as a result. Now more than ever we need to help those who need it and apply the pressure where it counts, both of which could be achieved by eliminating the wine import tariffs and applying them to other industries. Thank you in advance for your consideration.

Regards,
Peter Burrows
