I own a small retail wine store in California. In California, supermarkets can sell wine, and they sell a lot of Californian wine, my only point of difference is that I can specialize in the harder to understand European wines. However the last round of tariffs has hit my sales hard, and another will exacerbate this, on top of Covid 19 costs, and the general fear of unrest. Please leave small businesses out of disputes involving large aircraft - nothing could be further removed from what I do than a spat between countries over what multi-billion dollar companies are or are not doing!
