The provision that has been made on the application makes me feel I'm in a situation that's stating if I don't agree to give out my personal information, I will not be able to receive help from the SBDC. If this is not the message you want to relay, I suggest changing the verbiage. I will not work with an agency if there are stipulations such as release of my personal information or being forced to take part in surveys in order to receive services. Most will reply to surveys without having stipulations and release of information to government agencies is simply out of the question. May I see your personal information???
