

Author Full Name : Rachel HendrixReceived Date : 03/02/2021 04:17 PMComments Received :

Understanding the potential future of the investments the United States has made into human capital is incredibly important. It gives an indication of the changing workforce and where future innovation is more likely to occur. It can also be used to determine where more investments need to be made and how training should be amended. The US is the center of the world's human capital and the SED is important to remain competitive in a global economy.