there needs to be public scrutiny of greedy people who try to export and import wildlife for money and enrichment. just doing all of this automatically will allow far too many perverts and criminals to be able to get through. the machine will not catch them. we need both machine and personal inspection of these permits. we just had a case in lambertville nj where a guy tried to send live animals out and was caught. fortunately he was caught. he was fined a paltry amount and had a record of doing the same thing and being caught at it several years before so obviously once these pervert criminals get in this business the paltry fines are not dissuading them from continuing to abuse animals this way. i consider this a really dirty disgusting evil crime/. the animals die in these shipments. they do not deserve to have their life go by and lose their life in this dirty disgusting evil venal way by human scum. we need fines increased immediately. you can regulate this to increase the fines by ten times. make it worth their while to stop this disgusting evil crime of shipping live or dead animals. secondly, we need both personal inspection and machine catching of these scum human being perverts who abuse animals to enrich themselves. they are the lowest of the low. put them in jail besides the fine please. they don't deserve to be walking around. NJ man pleads guilty to illegally trying to ship lizards

TRENTON, N.J. (AP) — A New Jersey man has admitted illegally trying to send 10 live lizards to Hong Kong.

Jason Ksepka pleaded guilty in federal court in Trenton on Tuesday to falsely labeling an international shipment of wildlife from Lambertville in November 2017.
