The CFPB welcomes stakeholders to submit stories, data, and information about fees. To assist commenters in developing responses, the CFPB has crafted the below questions that commenters may answer. However, the CFPB is interested in receiving any comments relating to fees in consumer finance.

1. If you are a consumer, please tell us about your experiences with fees associated with your bank, credit union, prepaid or credit card account, credit card, mortgage, loan, or payment transfers, including:

a. Fees for things you believed were covered by the baseline price of a product or service.

b. Unexpected fees for a product or service.

c. Fees that seemed too high for the purported service.

d. Fees where it was unclear why they were charged.

2. What types of fees for financial products or services obscure the true cost of the product or service by not being built into the upfront price?

3. What fees exceed the cost to the entity that the fee purports to cover? For example, is the amount charged for NSF fees necessary to cover the cost of processing a returned check and associated losses to the depository institution?

4. What companies or markets are obtaining significant revenue from back-end fees, or consumer costs that are not incorporated into the sticker price?

5. What obstacles, if any, are there to building fees into up-front prices consumers shop for? How might this vary based on the type of fee?

6. What data and evidence exist with respect to how consumers consider back-end fees, both inside and outside of financial services?

7. What data and evidence exist that suggest that consumers do, or do not, understand fee structures disclosed in fine-print or boilerplate contracts?

8. What data and evidence exist that suggest that consumers do or do not make decisions based on fees, even if well disclosed and understood?

9. What oversight and/or policy tools should the CFPB use to address the escalation of excessive fees or fees that shift revenue away from the front-end price?

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

Title of Collection: Financial Well-Being Scale Malleability Survey.

OMB Control Number: 3170-0048.

Type of review: Submission of an IC under a generic information collection.

Affected Public: Individuals.

Estimated Number of Respondents: 4,000.

Estimated Total Annual Burden Hours: 1,000.

Abstract: The proposed research examines the malleability of individuals’ responses to CFPB’s Financial Well-Being Scale and/or changes to attitudes and behaviors based on completion of the scale. Financial practitioners and researchers use the CFPB Financial Well-Being Scale to measure financial well-being. This experiment will illustrate whether completion of the Financial Well-Being Scale immediately after using a financial tool (e.g., creating a budget) results in either higher or lower Financial Well-Being scores than completing the Scale without such a tool. The experiment will also test the robustness of the type of instrument used by testing both versions of the instrument (the five item Financial Well-Being Scale and the 10 item Financial Well-Being Scale). A maximum of 4,000 participants will be recruited from the panel maintained by the Understanding America Study (UAS) to complete the Financial Well-Being Scale Malleability Survey. The Bureau will collect information on financial well-being and information related to the budgeting tool including an assessment of the respondent’s experience using the tool, estimates of monthly income and spending, as well as questions about financial goals, budgeting, self-efficacy, and willingness to use such a tool in the future. The CFPB will not receive any personal identifiable information (PII).

Request for Comments: The Bureau is publishing this notice and soliciting comments on: (a) Whether the collection of information is necessary for the proper performance of the functions of the Bureau, including whether the information will have practical utility; (b) The accuracy of the Bureau’s estimate of the burden of the collection of information, including the validity of the methods and the assumptions used; (c) Ways to enhance the quality, utility, and clarity of the information to be collected; and (d) Ways to minimize the burden of the collection of information on respondents, including through the use of automated collection techniques or other forms of information technology. Comments submitted in response to this notice will be submitted to OMB as part of its review of this request. All comments will become a matter of public record.
