Good morning Maureen,

You received the email below this morning. I cut and pasted the content for your review but did not include the attachment.

I am uncomfortable with forwarding it to you for cybersecurity concerns.

And since it has nothing to do with the ICR for which NIST is seeking comments, my thought is to delete the email.

Please let me know if you are okay with this action or would rather instead that I forward the original email and attachment.

Dear Maureen,

I trust you are well.

My name is Shanay, and I am from Pan Chem Corporation in India. I would like to write to you in relation to OBM Control Number - 0693-0084 as the public was invited to provide their general comments.

As we too are manufacturers and exporters of nails from India, we would like to write to you, with a request to exempt nails that are packed in retail kits and in retail blisters. The issue is that ALL TYPES of nails are classified under 1 HS Code. Hence, even though the majority of the producers / shippers are shipping coiled / collated nails, our retail packed nails too are coming under the scanner. Most shippers are simply shipping their products as "Nails" due to which the entire HS Code gets red flagged. In fact as per the petitioner's website, they too are mainly focusing only on coiled / collated nails. Hence, it is my request to exempt loosely packed nails and Cut Masonry nails.

Please find attached our general comments for your reference. I hope we can get some relief on our retail packed nails.

Regards,
Shanay
