I believe that while the Supreme Court's upholding of the Executive Branch's vaccine mandate makes sense, I do not believe that it is right. Many people who have worked in the public sector for years are now having to make tough decisions regarding the future of their livelihood, decisions that they never wanted or thought they would ever have to make. Religious exemptions are a valid reasoning to not get the Covid-19 vaccine. However, regardless of a person's reasoning, a Covid-19 vaccine mandate is unnecessary for maintaining public health. In actuality, the Covid-19 vaccine only affects the health of the individual who takes it. It does not prevent one from spreading Covid, it helps one fight Covid if they have it. This is why the taking of the Covid-19 vaccine should be up to an individual, not mandated by an agency or company for their employees.
