NATIONAL SURVEY OF COLLEGE GRADUATES (NSCG)

Frequently Asked Questions

What is the National Survey of College Graduates?

Since the 1970s, the National Survey of College Graduates (NSCG) has been the most important source of information on the education and career paths of the nation's college-educated population. It is conducted by the National Science Foundation (NSF), an independent agency of the U.S. government that supports research and education. The U.S. Census Bureau serves as the data collection contractor for the NSCG on behalf of NSF.

How is the information used?

The information you provide will be used to...

- Deliver important information about the education and career paths of college graduates,
- Study the relationship between education and career opportunities in the United States,
- Assist people in making education and career choices,
- Inform decisions about how to best use limited resources in the areas of research, education, and job training

For other uses and more information, visit <http://www.census.gov/nscg>.

Who should participate?

We collect data on the entire college graduate population, including people with international degrees, non-STEM (science, technology, engineering, and math) degrees, and people who are or were retired. You were randomly selected to participate, and you represent hundreds of other college-educated people in the United States. We cannot replace you with another person because it would harm the quality of the data we collect. Your response is voluntary, and there is no penalty for not answering individual questions. The success of this survey depends on your response.

Will my information be kept confidential?

Yes, your personal information and responses to the survey are confidential. The information collected in this questionnaire is solicited under the authority of the National Science Foundation (NSF) Act of 1950, as amended. The Census Bureau is collecting this information under the authority of Title 13, Section 8 of the United States Code (U.S.C). The Census Bureau is required by law to keep your information confidential and can use your responses for statistical purposes only. The Census Bureau is not permitted to publicly release your responses in a way that could identify you. Federal law protects your privacy and keeps your answers confidential (Title 13, U.S.C, Section 9). Per the Federal Cybersecurity Enhancement Act of 2015, your data are protected from cybersecurity risks through screening of the systems that transmit your data.

How long will this survey take?

Although individual times may vary, the average time to complete the online survey is 20 minutes. The average time to complete the paper questionnaire is 30 minutes. Send comments regarding this burden estimate or any other aspects of this collection of information, including suggestions for reducing this burden, to the Reports Clearance Officer, Office of the General Counsel, National Science Foundation, 2415 Eisenhower Avenue, Alexandria, VA 22314.

Additional information about this survey

Under 5 Code of Federal Regulations 1320.5(b), an agency cannot conduct, sponsor, or require a response to a collection of information unless the collection displays a currently valid Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approval number. The OMB approval number for this survey is 3145-0141 and the expiration date is 11/30/2023.

In a few days, you will receive a mailing from the U.S. Census Bureau asking for your help with the 2021 National Survey of College Graduates (NSCG). This survey collects information about how people use their education over time and as economic conditions change. Since the 1970s, the U.S. Census Bureau has conducted this ongoing study on behalf of the National Science Foundation (NSF).

If you do not receive additional information from us within two weeks or have any questions about the survey, please contact the Census Bureau between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. Eastern Time on our toll-free number at 1-888-262-5935 or send an email to nscg@census.gov.

National results from this survey, as well as more information about the NSCG, are available at NSF's website: <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/srvygrads>.

Your participation helps form education-related policy decisions and ensures the validity of the results of this valuable national survey. We greatly appreciate your time.

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink, appearing to be "RJ" followed by a long, sweeping horizontal stroke.

Ron S. Jarmin
Acting Director
U.S. Census Bureau

In the past, you participated in the National Survey of College Graduates (NSCG), sponsored by the National Science Foundation (NSF) and conducted by the U.S. Census Bureau. Thank you – that information provided government, businesses, and academic institutions with crucial data on the career paths of college-educated individuals within the United States.

In a few days, you will receive a mailing from us asking for your help with the 2021 NSCG, which will enable us to update knowledge about how people use their education over time and as economic conditions change.

If you do not receive additional information from us within two weeks or have any questions about the survey, please contact the Census Bureau between 9 a.m. and 10 p.m. Eastern Time on our toll-free number at 1-888-262-5935 or send an email to nscg@census.gov.

National results from the previous survey cycle, as well as more information about the NSCG, are available at NSF's website: <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/srvygrads>.

Your participation helps form education-related policy decisions and ensures the validity of the results of this valuable national survey. We greatly appreciate your time.

Results from this survey show that in 2019, about 46% of college graduates had taken at least one course at a community or two-year college. This shows how college students and their families are adjusting to changes in tuition rates and the economy and can help aspiring college graduates plan for their education.

You were scientifically selected for this survey, and your response is very important. For help or additional information, email nscg@census.gov, or call, toll-free, 1-888-262-5935 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Eastern Time. Thank you in advance for responding to this important national survey.

Fourth Reminder
Please respond now

Recently, we sent you several requests for your participation in the 2021 National Survey of College Graduates. Your response is needed. We are asking that you complete this survey because your participation is critical to its success. If you have already responded, thank you.

National results from this survey are publicly available, providing information such as average salaries in over 28 fields and how they have changed over time. This can help inform the field of study for college students or career changes for professionals.

Please respond at <https://respond.census.gov/nscg>

Fifth Reminder
Your response is critical

About four weeks ago, we asked you to complete the 2021 National Survey of College Graduates. Your response is critical and helps the U.S. government allocate resources to research and education programs for advancement opportunities for you and others in the U.S. If you have already responded, please accept our thanks.

Respond by July 8th at <https://respond.census.gov/nscg>

Your response can help determine how U.S. graduation rates in various fields compare to other countries. It can also help identify areas for improvement in K-12 education to make our country more competitive.

If we do not receive your response in by July 8th, a Census Bureau representative may contact you.

The success of this national survey depends on your participation. We cannot substitute another college graduate for you. This survey helps policy makers and the public understand and quantify how people use their education as they age.

For additional information:

- email nscg@census.gov.
- call, toll-free, 1-888-262-5935 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Eastern Time.

Thank you in advance for your response.

Your response to the NSCG helps researchers use NSCG data for many reasons, including to understand:

- Why people leave jobs in various fields,
- What percentage of people are employed in the same field that they studied,
- How the participation of males and females in various fields has changed over time.

For help or additional information, email nscg@census.gov or call, toll-free, 1-888-262-5935 from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m. Eastern Time.

In the last few months the U.S. Census Bureau, on behalf of the National Science Foundation, has sent you several requests to participate in the National Survey of College Graduates (NSCG).

The 2021 NSCG will be ending soon. To date, we have not received a response from you. If you have recently completed the survey, thank you very much. If you have not yet had an opportunity to participate, please take a few moments to complete the survey now. We realize your time is valuable, but we need your participation for the survey results to be accurate and representative.

Your response to this survey is important, regardless of whether you are retired, do not work, or work in a field that differs from that of your education. The survey web site is secure, and all information that you provide is strictly confidential and protected by U.S. law.

To respond to the survey online, please:

1. Go to <https://respond.census.gov/nscg>
2. Enter your Login ID: <USERNAME>

September 28th will be the last day to respond. This is your last chance to help policy makers, researchers, and the public better understand the impact of a college education.

The NSCG is the only definitive source of data about the educational and occupational outcomes of our Nation's college-educated population. By surveying college graduates, we can improve our understanding of the relationship between college training and how people later use their education. If you are interested in learning more about the NSCG, please visit <http://www.nsf.gov/statistics/srvygrads>.

We apologize. We recently encouraged you to go to <https://respond.census.gov/nscg> to complete the 2021 National Survey of College Graduates. Shortly after you received that invitation, the NSCG web site experienced technical problems that made completing the survey difficult.

We are sorry for the poor technical performance you may have experienced when attempting to complete the NSCG online. We have identified and addressed these issues and encourage you to use the Login ID and Password from our previous mailing to complete the survey.

If you need a replacement Login ID and Password, please contact us toll-free by phone at 1-888-262-5935, or by email to nscg@census.gov. Staff are available from 9 a.m. to 10 p.m., Eastern Time, to assist you.

If you completed the NSCG before receiving this mailing, please accept our gratitude.

Sincerely,
