General Comment

the voluntary inspectino program does not work. it is cheaper for the us govt to make it voluntary and so that is why they did it. the federal govt does not want to regulate these rich corporations in the animal killing bu siness like jbs and smithfield. th3y want to let them do whatver they want to kill farm animals in the most horrendous abusive way possible. we have had many recalls and the system is slipping into total anarchy with these rich corporations in slaughterijng farm animals in the most abusiv e way possible of not adhering to any humane laws at all. the animals are treated horribly from their moment of birth by those in the factory farm sysgtem and the transport system also does not let the animals out after 28 hours packed like sardines in the trucks travelling through 100 degree weather. the animals stay packed in those trucks going from midwest to california slaughterhouses. we have all seen the videos. and then when tehy get to the slaughterhouse they are kicked and punched and even the downed ones are slaughtered which is a violation of law. but the violations of the law are massively ignored by the entire food indusgry and the us govt which does not enforce any laws. the us govt lets slaughterouses get away with thousands of violatinos of hte humane laws before they will shut one down. in fact i dont think a single slaughterhouse has ever been shut down. i think we need to look into that imo.

we need to stop the factory farming of all animals. it is inhumane. we need to let them otu of cages to move around. we annot let the rich corporations turn us all into going along with this factory farm system. it sucks. it is deplorable.it is the jungle all over again. back to the jungle as singlar lew is wrote about.
