The proposed N-PEARS plan and reporting system for SNAP-Ed necessitates numerous changes to established processes, including the workflow of annual plan submissions and the ways in which state and implementing agencies define and categorize their educational efforts. Our current understanding is that the N-PEARS system would be used first for the submission of FY24 annual plans and then for FY23 annual reports. At this point, the system has still not been finalized and, thus, trainings and other supporting resources are not yet available to users. This has limited our ability to prepare for the use of this system, and has led to concerns about our ability to successfully and fully meet the expectations established for the use of N-PEARS. Our comment/request is that the numerous changes, as well as the learning curve associated with transitioning to a new system, be considered and incorporated into the final plan for how the system is rolled out.
