I reviewed the form, and believe there is a missing field(s) that should be added since the goal is to ensure secure software supply chains. I think there should be a section to identify country of origin for the code in the program. In many of the agencies, particularly in classified environments, the requirements for Made in America is critical, but I see software that has been sold as Made in America, in which the company/division for the software has later been moved or sold to countries overseas. I see other instances where US Corporations shift development internally to new labs in China, India, etc.

Self-Attestation would be a good way to ensure notification of change in the status, particularly for software that is sold to scan/secure/etc the software supply chain itself.

_____ 100% Developed and Packaged in USA

_____ If No, List Countries in which developers of the program perform their task
