The increased ask from a one month snapshot to twenty-four months disrupted state agency plans for this study. The Management Information Systems were not built to pull this type and quantity of data and are not quickly updated to accommodate such requests without years of technical planning, development, testing, and deployment. The time, effort, and financial burden to state's is large and no funding was provide up front for such changes. The USDA should work proactively with states on expanding this survey, prior to releasing updated guidance and expectations.
