

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 04/15/2024 05:29 AMComments Received :

As a US citizen who has always lived abroad and never earned a penny on US soil, it makes absolutely no sense that I should be required to file taxes. It's none of the IRS's business to want to know what I do and earn in my own country of residency, and being mandated to inform them strangely conflicts with the American ideals of freedom and individualism. If I don't file, my bank accounts could be blocked and I could be percecuted, for literally nothing as I owe the US no tax money. The tax system of the US is horrifically archaic, let's start by changing citizenship-based taxation into residency-based taxation, bringing the process of filing your taxes up to speed with the current technological possibilities, and lastly: let's tax the rich and the large corporations and make them pay their fair share.