I do get why the FBAR was implimented. But, does anyone really believe that a person that is stashing(hiding) away illgotten dollars in a foriegn bank account is really going to file an FBAR? I think not.

In the meantime, retired expats like myself on fixed income of less than $100,000 has to jump through hoops and pay additional dollars to file, not to mention the angst.

Please consider removing this tax filing or at the very least, raise the $10,000 bank account limit for filing purposes to align with current dollar vaue.
