

Author Full Name : NancyReceived Date : 04/29/2024 04:47 AMComments Received :

I am a dual British/American citizen that lives in the UK. However, I pay American taxes as worked a long time in the USA, and still have family and a stocks in that country. I don't feel it is fair that FBAR threshold is so low at 10,000 since 1970 and not moved since then. I feel the American IRS/government should take into account inflation, etc. I am a hard working MH psychotherapist with a small amount of clients. I pay high UK taxes, on top of the need to pay a tax specialist each time I file in the US. My accountant in UK is overwhelmed by the system and my requirements in the US. Why should hard working, law abiding citizens be penalised? It makes you want to give up your citizenship, and that is sad b/c I am proud of being where I am from. Please make this easier!