It is ridiculous that the Census is even entertaining the idea of adding a "gender identity" question to the ACS survey. Think about how it will distort factual data. Transgenderism, for example, is a social trend. It is provably false by multiple scientific tests and, legally, it is fraud. A government survey would lend credibility to this sick trend and damage your own credibility by affirming the delusions of deranged people and supporting an obvious political agenda (you are supposed to be non-partisan, remember). There are no civil rights for people who pretend to be something else or make up a status or identity that does not exist or that they cannot prove. For an organization that attempts to provide reliable, accurate, and factual data, it is advisable that you not go down this road and contribute further to the deterioration of American society.
