

Author Full Name : Amber BrasherReceived Date : 05/27/2024 09:57 AMComments Received :

USDA works to increase food security and reduce hunger. Yet we're allowing the president and vice president to make changes to our program. They have well paid cooks and chefs. They have never grown up in poverty. There clue as to the real world and what they need.... These kids were serving don't eat like that at home and won't come to school and eat that way. If we make the food tasteless there not going to take it. It's hard enough for us employees to make them understand they have to have three components on there plates and why. So yes a lot of these kids don't have vegetables at home and if they don't like the tasteless ones at school there just getting it and going to throw it away. Sooooo much money and food is wasted away by trying to control everything these kids eat. In the mean time us lunchroom employees get paid not much but then you want to add more things to prepare in the little amount of time we have. On top of we already can't find employees bc of the little pay and yet all the hard work. Now these kids are not going to take anything from the tasteless options. You're just decreasing these kids food security and increasing there hunger!!! Along with wasting our tax dollars....