I oppose the plan to eliminate the Academic Libraries survey. I work for a large multi-type library system in the Midwest. We have over 1,000 member libraries including more than 100 academic libraries. We specifically use the Academic Libraries survey information to help us serve our members. That information is used in member engagement, grant-making, and group purchasing. Losing that information will make it much more difficult for my organization to show us changes and trends in the field.
