Libraries are important for educational purpose as well as for a recreational area for people to learn. I use the library regularly for research and to print school work, and I know plenty of other people who need the library, whether they be young students who use it for similar means. Or adults that need them to help them look for things like work, healthcare, etc. The library also offers workshops that greatly provide important resources for people, and allow an area for kids to adults alike to come together as a community. The library does a lot already, imagine what they are capable of if they have more support to be able to expand what they do instead of making the process more challenging.
