I am writing to share my opposition to the plan to eliminate the Academic Libraries survey. The unique longitudinal data in the survey provides crucial information about changes and trends in college and university libraries. As a librarian at an academic library and a member of the university's Outcomes Assessment Committee, the data from the survey is essential for evaluating the performance of our library as compared to those at other academic institutions. The survey data is also invaluable for my individual research efforts. It is an integral part of the data I use when writing articles regarding student achievement and retention for publication in professional journals.
