

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 06/13/2024 11:56 AMComments Received :

Although a burden on time for library staff and subsequently university staff involved with the Library services portion of IPEDS, this data remains one of the only places to find comparative data for academic libraries. Academic libraries rely on this data when addressing stakeholders about improving their libraries. This data is also useful in library and information science research necessary for librarians to develop further in their careers and the field of library science. Despite the time commitments, the benefits of the data collected outweigh the deficits.