Eliminating the Academic Library questions is doing a huge disserve to the many academic libraries across the nation. As it is there are very few questions asked and there is little enough comparable information, so eliminating this section cuts deep. Again, this appears to be a way to minimize the importance and impact of academic libraries to their institutions and to their students and faculty. Across the nation so many administrators are completely clueless about what a library does and this will only increase that ignorance.

This is a bad move and will have very long consequences. Badly done!
