The IPEDS Academic Libraries Survey provides indispensable data for benchmarking analysis, making its retention essential. Eliminating this survey from IPEDS would remove free access to critical data and a vital comparison tool for all academic libraries, large and small. This survey supplies academic libraries with the necessary data to conduct analyses that drive significant improvements in services. Such enhancements are crucial for bolstering our colleges and universities, directly supporting their missions of teaching, learning, and research. Preserving this survey is imperative for the continued advancement of academic institutions.
