

Author Full Name : Johannah WhiteReceived Date : 06/24/2024 10:29 AMComments Received :

This is my second comment on this issue. This summer our library has been madly collating data for our university's accreditation report. It made me reflect that without having access to data libraries might flounder without the benchmarking that results from sharing our own data and being able to see that of our peers across the nation. You can help libraries continue to maintain our high standards as well as find creative ways to surpass them by continuing to request and store this data.

"When we stop counting, we stop caring"

Thank you,

Johannah White

University of New Orleans