Colleges and universities are an important part of American life, and libraries are central to their mission of educating students and preparing them for the workforce. Librarians help students find, evaluate, and use different types of information. This is a crucial skill for everyone to have in a democracy. I realize that you want to cut costs but doing so in this area will have unforeseen costs down the line, in the form of libraries being less able to serve students, because their staff won't have crucial forms of data to let them know where the areas of need are. Please, please reconsider this.
