I oppose the plan to eliminate the Academic Libraries survey. I am a research and instruction librarian at a public university. My institution and others across the country rely on the information from the Academic Libraries survey for planning and assessment purposes. Without the information from the survey, it would become much more difficult for us to benchmark ourselves compared to our peers and to communicate our needs with our stakeholders. I urge you to reconsider this plan because it will have a significant negative impact on academic libraries, which are crucial for supporting student success.
