

Author Full Name : Ore AdaramolaReceived Date : 10/14/2024 05:18 PMComments Received :

Research has already pointed to the significance of early intervention in improving maternal mental health. Implementing these policies could mitigate the long-term risks associated with untreated mental health issues during pregnancy and postpartum.

The urgency of addressing substance use disorders among expecting mothers is critical. Working in the Behavioral Health I have personally to attest to the need of this proposed program. I am in support of this, and I believe this will be impactful addition to mental health care.