

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 01/15/2025 04:25 PMComments Received :

Just the 2016 guidelines that were made into state laws. Not updated to 2022 guidelines and most doctors do not even know the guidelines were updated. And mostly people are not prescribed opioids, and if you are allergic to gabapentin they say they cant help you. Doctors say they dont accept new patients who are on opioids, if you need to change doctors or move you cant or you lose access to pain medication if you are on any. The whole system of prescribing anything for pain seems to be confusing to doctors and patients and inconsistent. Being told if you have surgery your pain prescription is tylenol. Why would anyone have surgery and suffer?