

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 02/19/2025 04:55 PMComments Received :

I am a NYS farmer and born US Citizen who currently has a passport that would require renewal to leave the country. I cannot do this as I can not be assured my renewal request would accept my name and sex change. I no longer appear as a female, all of my documents have been changed to reflect my current appearance. The idea that this is "protecting women," which the federal government would categorize me as my sex assigned at birth, is absurd. I was also a baby at birth, yet there is no demand for my passport to state I am 0 years old, as that would also be absurd. If I were assigned a sex as it stand right now, post hormone therapy and surgery, I would be medically classified as intersex. I am a red blooded American through and through, and to have the government try to dictate who I am is unconstitutional. To limit my movement in and out of this country due to who I am is an infringement on my most basic rights. To say I can merely travel with a female gender marker on my passport is to ignore the reality- I will be stopped at every checkpoint for my documentation not matching appearance. I would be subject to invasive search. This policy will not stand.