

Author Full Name : Joe Vandello

Received Date : 02/19/2025 04:51 PM

Comments Received :

The inclusion of gender markers on passports is unnecessary in that it does not help identification purposes (and in fact, makes it harder to identify people who's appearance is ambiguous or non-traditional). Other countries don't have gender markers, and the U.S. used to have passports with gender markers.

If gender markers must be included on passports, they should be inclusive of all genders and respect transgender citizens.