I do not believe this policy is constitutional in its current form. Discrimination on the basis of gender identity is sex discrimination. By implementing these policies, you are necessarily violating long-standing laws and norms in regards to equal protection. The constitution demands that you protect trans rights and rescind this policy. This policy would enable the reversion of legally made changes to gender markers, which will put transgender citizens in danger. If their passport does not match their presentation or state-issued documents, they may be seized at borders or harassed. In many foreign nations, being transgender is a crime, and this may make citizens vulnerable to arrests abroad. This will increase the already-present danger to a vulnerable minority, and should be stopped.
