

Author Full Name : AnonymousReceived Date : 02/19/2025 05:13 PMComments Received :

Since the meat of this is the same as the other proposed passport changes I will repeat what I said.

As a red blooded, UFC watching American male (since birth if that's relevant here) I fail to see the necessity in this change. Not only does it exclude hermaphrodites and others like them but it simply an infringement of individual liberties that seems to signal a broader change on the horizon. Will we next have to list our circumcision status or sexual preferences?

All in all this seems more like an attempt to further demonize a small minority. I've heard it said that the Founding Fathers wouldn't recognize this country and I agree. While some of it would be due to the obvious culture shock anyone would receive from such a situation but moreso do to the government's increasing insistence on digging into the nation's private lives.

Furthermore, adding this onto an irrelevant change to sex offender identification feels like an attempt to lump people who don't fit a certain profile in with sex offenders. Passports already contain identifiers for sex offenders who are even able to apply for one.