It is utterly ridiculous and a waste of government time and money to remove the ability for people who are transgender or nonbinary to correctly note their gender on their passport. Besides the burden of changing paperwork and changing correct passports to now be incorrect, this will actually harm national security and delay travelers even further.

Just imagine that a trans woman, clothed as she often is in a lovely pink and white floral sundress from Macy's and that fabulous new pushup bra she saw advertised in Vogue, appears in the TSA line and holds up a passport that labels her as "male". Are you telling me that this won't cause delay and difficulties for everyone, including her, the TSA agents, and the poor family behind her that's just trying to visit Grandma Jo?

This move is stupid, wasteful, discriminatory, and just plain bad policy. And by the way, when will the trans and nonbinary travelers be required to wear pink triangles? Just checking so I can be prepared to wear a yellow star next.
