I'm not trans, or even gay or anything, but I know the government has no business telling people who they are. IDs like passports should reflect who their owner is, not be a way for some politician to dictate what Americans can and can't be. There should be M and F and X on passports, and if enough people want them, more letters, with a guide in the back of the passport if need be, because the purpose of these documents is identifying people, not handing out government designations.
