I am not transgendered but I have no trouble thinking that life is different now than when America was allegedly "great." If people find non-binary gender identification a part of their lives, there is no harm in their official documentation reflecting that. I am also very wary that the effort to erase transgendered people will not stop there and will roar on through whatever other groups certain powerful individuals want erased from the U.S. Horrible precedent. Let people indicate this basic human representation as they wish. It harms no one.
