I'm concerned about expecting people to carry a passport with a gender identity that may not match their appearance. Many people as they age start to look like the other gender even if they are not transgendered. Gender is not a reliable identity factor. Many women go bald as they age, for example, and get hair on their faces. It seems to me that targeting trans individuals could rebound and hurt some of us as we age. Please don't make such a big deal about gender on the passports, this doesn't help regular Americans like me. Thanks!
