Passports are intended to be identifying documents. It makes no sense to me to only allow biological sex at birth on these documents. If someone looks like a woman, dresses like a woman, talks like a woman, says they are a woman, and then has male on their passport, doesn't that just create confusion and cause delays in travel and processing papers? Passports aren't badges of honor that the government bestows on its favorite citizens. They're identifying documents to facilitate travel. That's it. Let people identify themselves on those documents.
