I'm concerned about individuals who followed laws still on the books, getting gender changes and names changes - they were following the law and those identity documents should be respected. Don't make such a big deal about gender. People are who they are. Gender isn't even a good way to identify people. You should be more worried about the plane crashes and the terrorists. Real Americans like myself want to be able to get a new passport when we need one and not have to worry that the system is totally bogged down with unreasonable rules. Thank you.
