The removal of the X designation is not only incorrect for intersex individuals born in the United States who's assigned sex at birth is neither male more female, it is in violation of court rulings related to Zzyym v. Blinken. This is an enormous strain to the passport adjudicators to have to spend additional time digging up documents unrelated to those necessary to establish an applicant's validity for a US passport. These added stresses and delays cause additional harm to applicants by creating the opportunity for more errors. My own application for passport was issued to me with my name misspelled due to the "added confusion" this proposal placed on the passport authority. These policies are disruptive, discriminatory, disingenuous, and inefficient. All this serves to do is create more obstacles for US citizens to obtain their rightfully owed identity documents. This administration will achieve nothing beyond bogging down their own system, creating more hardship for applications and the state department. This hurts everyone and helps no one.
