The recent changes due to the "Defending Women from Gender Ideology Extremism and Restoring Biological Truth to the Federal Government" executive order do not, in fact, defend women. I am one, I have been since birth, and this does nothing for me. I am not threatened by the existence of a third gender designation. If that is what some people want, they should have it. I doesn't hurt anyone, and this is supposed to be a free country, built on individualist principles.

Additionally, this is not "biological truth." Some people are born intersex, with physical characteristics associated with both males and females, and are born with different chromosome configurations than just XY and XX. This is well-documented fact and has always happened, but usually these people have their gender identity decided by their parents when they're infants, which is happening less often as people realize it isn't right to make that decision for them. And the government is even less qualified to make that decision.
