The desire to change passports so they reflect "Biological Sex" is an unneeded and unwelcome addition to the passport process. Doing so will not help with keeping women safe and so has no purpose in defending women from gender ideology. In terms of biological sex there are many individuals who do not really fall into either category, how should these individuals be treated? It does not make things anymore safe or anymore clear.

Speaking as a woman myself I do not feel protected with these measures and find the addition of it to just muddy the waters. The human body is diverse and not as easily defined as just two sexes, I believe it important that official documents reflect this truth.
