Our country is a place which should be regarded as one of intellectual and academic superiority. It is a place which has in the past been regarded as a country which boasts a profoundly diverse people. It is a place which is known for tolerance and respect of others.

The executive orders created this year under President Trump's administration are sorely lacking in terms of legality and patriotism. Many of these orders oppose the concepts which the USA is known for.

Diverse populations should be entitled to self-identification, including changing names to those recognized by a judiciary entity and changing demographic data about these individuals. They should also be entitled to ensure their personal security by acquiring replacements for passports which have been replaced. There are many conditions under which the common person would be entitled to these practices, however, there is a noticeable difficulty in these basic entitlements for our more diverse citizens. America is founded on the concept of a basic equality and equity between men. It would be a mark on our country if we were not to demonstrate what it is the USA is known for.
