I do not believe it is ethically sound or legal to push through significant changes to American identity documents in the current political climate. There are lawsuits occurring at the time of this writing where judges are ruling on the constitutionality of the declarations specifically targeting transgender individuals. I think it is not only illegal but immoral to deny documents to American citizens that reflect who they are and the legal steps they took to declare it, particularly when the country's leadership is actively targeting them.

Please reconsider any changes to citizens' documents without this order being legitimately voted into law.
